THE SECRET IN THE SOUP

The secret of good Tomato Soup is a complex matter. Selection of the right tomato is one element. Good salad tomatoes or good ketchup tomatoes are not necessarily the best for soup. The proper blending of pure spices is another requisite. Then there's the cream—it must be cream, rich and pure. Milk won't do.

HEINZ Cream of Tomato Soup is superior on account of H. J. Heinz Co.'s large facilities in bringing together all the above elements. It is made with all the care and cleanliness for which the "Home of the 57 Varieties" is famed.

Your grocer has it in tins of three sizes. Guaranteed to suit you or money back.

BALDWIN'S FUNERAL

It Was the Largest on Maui for Many Years.

The funeral of the late Fred Baldwin on Saturday was one of the largest and most impressive ever held on Maui. People came from every part of the island to attend, and many were there from Honolulu. Rev. B. V. Bazata, pastor of the foreign church at Makawao, officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. Beckwith at the grave. Bishop Restarick and Canon Ault of the Episcopal church were present.

The remains were brought ashore from the Nebraskan at Kahului on a white and black draped platform, and the car bearing the body to the residence of H. P. Baldwin, at Spreckelsville, was likewise draped. The casket was of solid mahogany with massive trimmings.

The funeral, in charge of H. H. Williams of Honolulu, took place from the Baldwin home at 2 p. m. A male quartet sang several hymns both at the home and the grave. There were ten pall-bearers.

Flowers came from New York, San Francisco, Honolulu and almost every part of Maui. There was a large variety of set pieces. Three wagons were loaded with the floral offerings.

The burial took place at Makawao, nine miles from the Baldwin residence, the cortege moving up hill almost the entire distance, and hundreds of people followed the remains to their last resting place. There were forty carriages in the procession. It was the largest funeral cortege on the island of Maui for many years.

At New York many classmates of the young man remained with the body until the removal of the same for shipment to Maui.

The Maui News refers to the reception of the remains at Kahului as follows:

"The A. H. S. S. Nebraskan arrived at Kahului direct from San Francisco at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, November 2, bearing the body of Frederick Chambers Baldwin, who died in New York, October 11. Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Baldwin and Miss Baldwin were passengers on the Nebraskan, having accompanied the body of their brother Fred from New York. The Nebraskan on her arrival in port was met by a party composed of Hon. H. P. Baldwin, Mrs. J. P. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Baldwin, and a number of friends who escorted the remains of the lamented young man ashore."

PARTY SPEND YESTER- DAY ON RABBIT ISLE

that there were some very large fish to be caught.

One big fellow was hooked which at the first rush broke a stout line as if it had been a piece of cotton. It was probably an ulua, which in Hawaiian waters attains a weight of as much as sixty pounds.

To attempt to land one of these monsters with ordinary tackle is parlor work and reminds one of the scriptural saying: "Canst thou draw out leviathan with a hook?"

A native was fishing on the island when the party arrived and had been at it with net and hook and line all night. He had collected quite a mess of pipipi, mullet, abolihoi and other fish and had secured a sack of aama, or black crabs, which, eaten raw, are esteemed a great delicacy by many people.

Daylight brought poor fishing, and the kanaka decided to try a more remunerative form of capture. Diving down into deep water he searched until he had located something worth the trying after and returning to shore produced a stick of dynamite and walked out on the rocks until he was as close as he could get to the hole into which he had previously dived.

Then he lighted a strand of rope and with this set fire to the fuse attached to the giant powder, and after waving it round in his hand to hasten ignition, as soon as the fuse had burned sufficiently low, threw the dynamite into the hole.

The effort was well timed, for before the powder had sunk to the bottom a tremendous explosion occurred, making the water on the surface fairly boil.

Presently several big fish rose stunned to the surface and were easily secured. The biggest was an amani, a big brown fellow, weighing perhaps five pounds. There were also three big blue hulu in the harvest of the blast.

A couple of years ago there were several goats on Rabbit Island, but they were killed off and there is only one big billy goat left. On the neighboring island of Mokuohi there is an immense black angora goat which has made the place his home for many years and has so far escaped annihilation.

About three o'clock in the afternoon the party boarded the Brothers and the course was laid for home, Honolulu being reached after a quick run of two hours and twenty-five minutes.

The outing was most enjoyable and every one felt the better for the bathing and exercise indulged in and the sweet, invigorating air breathed throughout the trip.

When one gets tired of the delights of Waikiki and when the charms of the Pali and Tantalus pail; when the scent of tropic blossoms becomes a burden and the heart yearns for something fresh to see and something new to do, no better suggestion can be offered than to pack up a kit of fishing tackle, strap a shot gun alongside your rod, stow some sandwiches and a flask in your pocket, and, in company with a boon companion or companions, pay a visit of investigation to one of the little islands which are fathered by bluff old Oahu.

Old Planters

The Hawaiian Gazette Co. has, at considerable expense, succeeded in completing a limited number of sets of Planters' Monthlies from Vol. 1 of 1882 up to the first of the present year.

Of the earlier numbers, long since out of print, many issues were entirely exhausted, making it necessary to reset and reprint all such numbers, thus adding materially to the cost. This extra expense was more than justified, however, by the valuable nature of much of the matter contained in these old numbers, matter that cannot be found elsewhere than in these books and that is valuable really beyond price to the plantation interests.

These Planters are uniformly bound in full law sheep, giving them an attractive appearance in addition to their durability.

Anyone desiring a complete set, or any part of a set, would do well to communicate with the Gazette Co. at an early date, as there are but very few sets available at the present time, and in order to complete more sets it will be necessary to reset and print more back numbers, thus increasing the cost still more.
